1. The first part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the
 2. various methods of determining the rate of reaction. The
 3. most common method is the measurement of the change in
 4. concentration of one of the reactants or products over a
 5. period of time. This method is usually applicable to reactions
 6. which are first order or second order. For reactions of higher
 7. order, the method of initial rates is often used. In this
 8. method, the initial rate of reaction is determined for
 9. several different initial concentrations of the reactants. The
 10. order of the reaction is then determined from the relationship
 11. between the initial rate and the initial concentration.

The first thing I noticed when I stepped out of the train was the cold air.
 It was a sharp contrast to the warm, humid air of the South.
 I had heard that the North was a different world, and now I knew it was true. The people here were different, their customs and ways of thinking.
 I had come here with a sense of adventure, but now I felt a little lost. I was alone in a strange land, and I didn't know where to turn. I had no friends here, no family.
 I was a stranger in a strange land, and I was all alone.

Handwritten text at the top of the page, possibly a title or header, which is mostly illegible due to fading. It appears to contain several lines of text.

The first of these is the fact that the system is not self-sufficient. It requires a constant supply of raw materials and energy. The second is the fact that the system is not self-regulating. It requires constant human intervention to maintain its operation. The third is the fact that the system is not self-renewing. It
 intervention to replace worn-out parts and equipment. The fourth is
 it from external threats.
 intervention to improve its performance. The sixth is the fact that the
 adapting. It requires
 intervention to adapt
 is the fact that the
 organizing. It requires
 intervention to organize it into a coherent whole. The eighth is
 is not self-maintaining. It requires
 its operation. The ninth
 repairing. It requires
 its components. The tenth is the fact that
 destroying. It requires
 intervention to destroy it when it is no longer useful.
